THE CASE FOR A SCIENTIFICALLY OBJECTIVE EVOLUTION CURRICULUM

7:30 PM, May 17, 2005, Room F116, Totino Fine Arts Center, Northwestern College

Randall Hedtke, a retired biology teacher, will explain how to teach evolution as theory rather than doctrine. He will attempt to dispel all of the well-cultivated illusions regarding the question of origins in the biology curriculum. Consider the following: Charles Darwin deliberately rejected scientific objectivity in the Introduction to the Origin of Species. The issue is not between science and religion, but first and foremost between legitimate science and Darwinian pseudoscience. Professionally speaking, educators cannot teach evolution the way evolution proponents would have it taught. Evolution is not a secular explanation for origins; it is a doctrine of Religious Humanism, which explains its departure from legitimate science. Vital information unfavorable to evolution in the last edition of the Origin, the incipency problem, continues to be withheld from students. Academic honesty dictates a revelation of that information.

All meetings are free and open to the public. A free-will offering will be taken.

Creation Scholarships Available for Fall 2005

The Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary (RPTS) in Pittsburgh (www.rpts.edu) has one full and two partial scholarships for students who believe in a six-day, young earth creation. It is funded by a private donor who is affiliated with the Creation Science Fellowship of Pittsburgh (CSFP).

This program provides formal theological training that includes both a solid Biblical apologetic and practical experience in the important field of creation science. Students will be required to take the Seminary's Bible and Science course as well as intern with the CSFP by attending monthly meetings, preparing for and helping with special events, including the International Conference on Creationism.

To apply for the Genesis Scholarships, call RPTS at 412-731-8690 or email gvanleuven@rpts.edu

Christian Resource Center

Last month we encouraged you to check out CERC but our information was out of date. They changed their name, and contact information.

The library has grown to well over 10,000 resources with the Creation Science section still the largest portion of the library. In March 2003, Grace Church Roseville opened their newly-built education wing where the Christian Resource Center is located. More information is available on the web at gracechurchroseville.org, click on Ministries and then CRC. At this site you can get current hours and directions. Phone number is 651-633-6479 Extension 303 -- or if you listen to the recording you can choose #3 which will do the same thing.... email crc@gracechurchroseville.org

Adventure Safaris

By Daniel Nuckols

Adventure Safaris

We have a full summer of activities ahead of us. Travel to several states presenting the creation message in churches, camps and of course the dinosaur dig in South Dakota. Please pray for travel safety and for open hearts and minds to hear and absorb the truth. Details and dates are on our web site.

A special thanks and congratulations to each student who entered the writing contest. Everyone was a winner because they learned much more than showed in their reports. Our hope is this will be the catalyst for a life-long learning process and maybe a career will develop.

Adventure Safaris presents the Creator, His designs and laws to homeschool coops. Contact us if you are interested in receiving an excellent science education for your students. As a nonprofit organization, we are supported by our school work as well as by interested churches and individuals. All gifts made out to TCCSA are tax deductible. Designate what your gift is for.
